Spirits and Mixed Drinks

The inspiration for our restaurant's drinking culture comes from the ceremonial act of enjoying aperitivi and then digestivi on either side of the meal. We believe in the benefits of this Italian ritual and encourage you to enhance your dining experience by taking part.

VINTAGE COCKTAILS

VIEUX CARRÉ 16

Sazerac 6 Yr. Rye Whiskey / Maison Surenne Cognac / Carpano Antica Vermouth
Benedictine / Peychaud's Bitters / Angostura Bitters / Lemon Twist

Round and round and round we go, where we stop, we'll never know. But what we do know is we'll be drinking the Vieux Carré cocktail at The Carousel bar, looking out over the old square in 'Nawlins and feeling just a little bit like it's the 1930's. The aforementioned 'Old Square' is the location of the Hotel Monteleone as well as the name of the drink under discussion, created by barman Walter Bergeron in 1938. Before the bar turned you right round baby, it was a fixated watering hole and nightclub called The Swan Room, beckoning the likes of literary luminaries and big band stars. Seemingly inspired by the array of people visiting this famous part of town, Mr. Bergeron added a little of this and that; things relevant to the incoming influence of spirited flavors from far away lands. As it was then as it is today, the Vieux Carré takes you back to old New Orleans and makes one wish all carousel rides came with one in hand.

PENICILLIN 14

Black Grouse Blended Scotch / Laphroaig 10 Year / Ginger / Honey / Lemon

We'd all been waiting for the Cosmopolitan to take a seat and relax the bright pink agenda it so loudly forced on the modern cocktail scene. As is with most drinks made of vodka, a close relative to rubbing alcohol, the idea was not to taste it. Not because it's bad necessarily, but because people didn't know how to drink. After a few seasons in the early part of the newest century, a fondness for crafted cocktails and spirits imbued with place and purpose caught on along the coasts of our great, intoxicated nation. And with that new adoration came bartenders and their customers in an absolute frenzy to mix everything. Of the hundreds of thousands of new potions made by the hands of bar (wo)men overwhelmed by the demand of their patrons to CREATE!, the best of them all came from an Aussie boy in 2005 named Sam Ross. He created the Penicillin cocktail at Milk and Honey, formerly owned by cocktail wonder and dearly departed Sasha Petraske, who told Sam to keep it simple and work hard on perfecting with as few ingredients as possible. Well, how does Scotch, ginger and honey, some lemon juice and a little more Scotch for good measure sound? Sounds like the Penicillin is the cure-all to that pesky Cosmo that's been lingering around far too long.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM 12 (Barrel Aged)

Dolin Dry Vermouth / Benedictine / St. George Absinthe

There was a time in American history when going to a bar for your favorite cocktail wasn't so simple. In the time of temperance committees and bans on alcohol sales, you'd have to find a local speakeasy to secretly sip on cocktails made of boot-legged liquor or know a guy who knew a guy hiding whiskey behind his artwork. One alternative was to take the party to sea, and if you were a wealthy imbibor this is exactly what you did. Travel by ship was largely popular in the 1920's and reached a new level of greatness in 1930 when the S. S. Europa made its first trip to New York from Germany. In just 5 days, the dry country of the United States was a forgotten bad dream to the voyagers on board who could once again revel in the fine act of unfettered tippling. The Chrysanthemum cocktail was reported to be a favorite on this particular vessel, one of many drinks named after flowers during this period of time but surely one of the best. It's herbaceous, honeyed notes with a sturdy pour of dry vermouth make this a delight to enjoy, and not just one but probably another and another; a nice advantage of drinking something lower in alcohol means you can drink more... right?
